This may be the most unique project that has been posted on this site. Apparently, there is this small company called the "Solo Light" company who have this product called the Solo Light and they have even gone out and produced a store on ebay for this product. The appearance and design of this product is similar to the new iXS light from Gossamer Gear and in some ways the design of it is even better. This is not marketed as a flashlight, this light is marketed as a laser. The name is probably a bit misleading in that it comes with a laser for aiming, but as stated before this isn't for shooting lasers, it's simply to point your flashlight in the right direction or to provide some illumination for you to take pictures. The Solo Light (working name: Solo Light Laser) consists of what appears to be an iXS size, a laser and two AAA batteries. I'm not sure what size batteries are required to operate this thing, but I'd be willing to bet that two AA batteries would suffice. The laser is actually very small and has enough power for the job you want to do, it's not very powerful, but it's definitely more than adequate. It has a finish similar to and looks similar to iXS, it's black with silver detailing and the outer shell is smooth and it slides into a pocket on your vest. I'm not sure how bright this thing actually is, but it definitely has a lot more illumination than a flashlight, even though it's laser technology this thing has a lot of brightness and is certainly usable as a flashlight. I really like this product, if you're in an area
